Huge Sum Resettled Jews In U.S. In Five Years

Erwin Rosenberg, president of the United Service for New Americans, said at the Agency's two-day national conference at the Astor Hotel, in New York, that American Jewish communities had spent $37,000,000 in the last five years to finance the "greatest voluntary resettlement program in the history of the United States."

Speaking before several hundred Jewish leaders, Mr. Rosenberg declared that 100,000 homeless European Jews, the majority of them sole survivors of families that were lost in Nazi crematoriums and concentration camps, had "found sanctuary and an opportunity to begin life anew on American shores" since 1945.

President Truman, in a message to the conference, declared that the "plight of the many thousands of people still homeless in Europe is a matter of great concern to all freedom-loving men and women." The President expressed the hope that "in the weeks ahead the Congress will take favorable action to offer sanctuary on our shores to even larger numbers."

The United Service is one of the beneficiary agencies of the United Jewish Appeal. The others are the United Palestine Appeal and the Joint Distribution Committee.

Mr. Rosenberg stressed that the figure of $37,000,000 constituted a "very minimum estimate of the amount spent on resettlement of homeless Jews here," as it included only funds spent by the United Service to meet the initial needs of the newcomers.

"American Jews demonstrated in 1949 and will again in 1950 demonstrate their readiness to participate actively in the DP program by making available the necessary funds and passing assurances in accordance with provisions of the DP Act of 1948," he added.

Arthur Greenleigh, executive director of United Service, said in his report that 380 communities had cooperated with the Agency last year to provide jobs and homes for Jewish newcomers from European DP camps.

Speaking on behalf of Henry Morgenthau Jr., general chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, Joseph Chernar of Washington, national campaign chairman of the Appeal, predicted that the United Jewish Appeal "would raise more funds in 1950 than in any year since the Appeal was established."

"Our work and our generosity must continue unabated during the coming year," Mr. Chernar said. "If we fail to follow through, we shall jeopardize all that has been accomplished at the cost of so much blood and sweat and tears. We dare not condemn Israel's new citizens to long months of misery and hopelessness in the primitive reception camps."

Wins Award As "Statesman Of Retailing"

Fred Lazarus Jr. of Cincinnati, Ohio, and New York, since 1945 president of Federated Department Stores, Inc., received the seventh annual Tobé Award for Distinguished Contribution to American Retailing, at a dinner in the St. Regis Hotel, in New York.

Federated Department Stores, Inc., includes Bloomingdale's in Manhattan; Abraham & Strauss in Brooklyn; Filene's in Boston, Mass.; Foley's in Houston, Tex.; Halliburton's in Oklahoma City, Okla.; and the Boston Store, in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Mr. Lazarus has been president of the company since 1945.

The Tobe Award, established in 1943, is an engraved crystal plaque set in an ebony stand. The award was instituted by Tobé, fashion and merchandising consultants.

Dean Donald K. David of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, last year's winner, made the presentation with the remark that Mr. Lazarus was "a man who has contributed greatly to the science, art and dignity of retailing, who has become an outstanding representative of retailing in the eyes of the community at large and who has attained such public stature that he may aptly be called the statesman of the profession."

Mr. Lazarus was born in Columbus, Ohio, on October 29, 1884, and, according to his own confession, has been in the retailing business since 1894. He has served as a member of the business advisory council of the Department of Commerce and the research and policy subcommittee of the Committee on Economic Development. Mr. Lazarus also was chairman of a group studying national security and individual freedom at the Government's request.

He cautioned the American public against the perils that might derive from a super-abundance of controls, such as the crop harvested during and immediately after the late war, according to the New York Times.

"Again the temptation will be to chisel on the fundamentals of freedom, economic and social," asserted Mr. Lazarus. He said there must be no smugness about our

Women Urge New D.P. Bill To Increase Entries

Resolutions urging the Senate to ratify the United Nations Genocide Treaty and adopt the Celler Displaced Persons Bill were unanimously adopted by 2,000 delegates at the thirtieth annual convention of the Federation of Jewish Women's Organizations in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York.

Recalling that 800,000 displaced persons still were under the care of the International Refugee Organization in Germany, Austria and Italy, the first resolution said that the new DP bill would correct the "unjust and unworkable" provisions of the Displaced Persons Act of 1948. The new bill, pending since June, would increase to 339,000 the number of displaced persons to be admitted to the U.S.

The second resolution whose adoption was reported by telegram to President Truman and members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Genocide sub-committee, said that "the world is waiting for our endorsement." It explained that the United Nations Convention on Genocide aimed to prevent and punish intentional destruction of human beings because of their racial, religious, or national origin.

The Federation also announced that a synagogue would be equipped at the Bird S. Coler Hospital on Welfare Island as a 1950 project supported by 200,000 women in 450 member clubs.

Benjamin Cohen, assistant secretary general for public information at the United Nations, urged the audience to have faith in the world organization. He said it would tackle problems of increasing difficulty this year and solve some of them to keep peace in the world.

Memorial Is Centre Of Controversy

The Museum of Modern Art, in New York, held a press preview marking the opening of a month-long exhibition of a model of a memorial to 6,000,000 Jews killed by the Nazis. The model had been adjudged best of several submitted, but was later rejected by the judging committee and the New York City Park Department.

The model was made at the invitation of the American Memorial to 6,000,000 Jews of Europe, Inc., formed in 1947, which had reached an agreement with the city for the erection of a memorial in Riverside Park at Eighty-fourth Street.

Adjudged best of those submitted was one by Percival Goodman, professor of architecture at Columbia University, which provided for a large flagstone area terminating at a wall 120 feet long and twenty-five feet high. In front of the wall is a platform on which an altar can be erected, while at one side is a Menorah, or candelabrum, twenty feet across and twelve feet high, mounted on a forty-foot-high granite pedestal.

At this point the stories of Mr. Goodman, A. R. Lerner, of 165 West Forty-sixt Street, administrative chairman of the committee, and Arthur Hodgkiss, executive secretary of the Parks Department, differ considerably, according to the New York Herald Tribune.

Mr. Goodman says that his memorial should be erected and that Park Commissioner Robert Moses and his department have no conception of art but merely want decorations. He complained in one communication of "artistic backwardness" of city officials and indicated that in his opinion the judging committee lacked courage.

Mr. Lerner said that while Mr. Goodman's model had been the best of those submitted, several changes were suggested which the architect refused to make. The plan, he said, lacked "emotional impact."

Mr. Hodgkiss said the rejection was based on these facts: The memorial would take up an inordinately large amount of space in one of the city's most crowded parks. The memorial as conceived would make that part of the park useless for recreational purposes, he said. In addition, he said, the candelabrum, set between the West Side Highway and Riverside Drive, might cause automobile accidents by attracting the eyes of drivers.

The Museum of Modern Art jumped into the conflict when in addition to exhibiting the scale model of the design, its director of

Israel Orchestra Of 95 To Come On Tour

The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra will visit for the first time next winter, opening a ten-week tour of the United States and Canada in January. This announcement was made by S. Hurok, concert manager, and Edward A. Norman, president of the American Fund for Israel Institutions, at a luncheon at Mr. Norman's home, 124 East Seventieth Street, in New York.

The ninety-five members of the orchestra will fly from Israel late in December and give their first American concert during the first week in January. Paul Paray, president and musical director of the Colonne Orchestra in Paris, and Leonard Bernstein, young American conductor, will direct some of the concerts of the tour; two or three other prominent conductors will also appear with the Israeli musicians.

Noted soloists, according to Mr. Hurok, will also be invited to appear with the orchestra, which is in its fourteenth season. Negotiations for the tour, which has been under consideration for two or three years, were recently completed between the American Fund for Israel Institutions and the Israel Philharmonic, which has been a beneficiary of the Fund since 1942.

Mr. Paray and Mr. Bernstein were present at the luncheon. Mr. Paray, for a guest engagement with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, conducted the Israel Philharmonic last spring and fall, and will return to it early this spring; Mr. Bernstein will begin his third season with the orchestra late in April.

The Israel Philharmonic, originally known as the Palestine Philharmonic, was founded by the late Bronislaw Huberman, Polish violinist, in February, 1936, with an original membership of sixty-five talented musicians who had been dismissed from their posts in German orchestras by the Nazi regime for racial or political reasons.

Arturo Toscanini accepted Mr. Huberman's invitation to conduct the opening concerts, which took place that December in Tel-Aviv, Jerusalem and Haifa, after several weeks of rehearsals under William Steinberg, now conductor of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra. Issay Dobrowen and Michael Taube also shared the opening season.

The orchestra has had an uninterrupted career ever since, continuing through World War II, when it played for Allied forces in Palestine and Egypt, and during the warfare before and during the early days of the state of Israel, when it played both in Israeli cities and towns and for soldiers at the front. Its membership now consists of musicians of many nations: origins as well as musicians born in Palestine, says the New York Herald Tribune.

Some contemporary Israeli composers, such as Ben Chaim, Odeon

Long-Secret Fight Over Anti-Semitism Charges In U.N. Comes Out

A long-secret fight over charges of anti-Semitism in the United Nations Secretariat came into the open, when Secretary General Trygve Lie ordered reinstatement of five originally discharged Jewish employees who had brought the accusations. He said he would "review the situation" of three superiors against whom the charges were leveled.

"On the basis of the report of the Special Board of Inquiry," Mr. Lie said in his statement, "I have found no evidence establishing an overt act of anti-Semitism, nor has it been proved that any action relating to the case was motivated by anti-Semitism'. There were, however, administrative actions of an irregular character which had the appearance of unfair discrimination against the complainants and certainly caused the complainants to suffer unjustly.

"I feel most strongly that officials of the U. N. Secretariat are under a special duty at all times, not only to act without bias and discrimination, but to act in such a way that there is even no appearance of discrimination. Although the board made no recommendations regarding the supervisors involved, I will review their situation in the light of this principle." (It was authoritatively understood that three supervisors were likely to leave the U. N. service.)

Of the five complainants, two have been on the U. N. pay roll, although not in their own section, pending the investigation, and they received their original posts and seniority. The others, who now have civil service jobs in Manhattan, were offered reinstatement with seniority and compensation for any net loss of earnings resulting from their U.N. discharge, reports the New York Herald Tribune. In fact, reinstatement would increase the section involved to sixteen persons — and the 1950 budget allows only nine, so the entire section must now run the economy gauntlet.

Mr. Lie said he would withhold names of the persons involved "in view of the nature of the charges" and "because part of the record is presumptive in character and publication might therefore result in unjustly damaging the reputations of some staff members mentioned."

The Secretary General acted on the basis of a unanimous report of a board consisting of Dr. W. B. Sutch, New Zealand delegate, as chairman; John P. Humphrey, director of the U.N. Division of Human Rights; and David Weintraub, director of the U. N. Division of Economic Stability and Development.

The particular section has been the scene of controversy for more than two years, involving complaints of demotion of Jews and promotion of non-Jews, and granting of "permanent" contract status to newcomers when oldtimers with like status were facing budget slashes.

The climax came when, with nine Jews and seven non-Jews on the payroll, the section had to be cut to eleven members — and in May, 1948, five of the Jewish members received three-month notices

In qualifying for membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations, publishers are doing more than providing advertisers with the facts about the circulation of their publications.

They are also giving active support to the principle that advertising space should be bought and sold only on the basis of verified information — a principle that has contributed in large measure to the interests of all advertisers.

In Canada, the Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Linfield, executive secretary of the Jewish Statistical Bureau which is preparing the work for publication the first complete Jewish [illegible] taking representative of all wings of American Judaism, will list all rabbis, all Jewish congregations and other principal institutions with pertinent data, and new statistics of the American Jewish community. Over 4,500 questionnaires, were sent to the rabbis of the United States and Canada, in a final drive to insure complete and accurate information. This is the largest list ever compiled. It is imperative, Dr. Linfield stated, that every rabbi return his questionnaire, properly filled in, before the close of the year.

An overheated, stagnant atmosphere lacks invigoration, makes for slackness and irritability and encourages colds. Moreover, it makes ventilation difficult because entering air seems chilling by comparison. Working in rooms kept at abnormally high temperatures causes dried and sallow skin, nose, throat and chest troubles, and a decreased appetite. Health in Canada is a personal affair. Make sure your health is adequately protected.

of dismissal, even though they held seniority over others.

On July 14, 1948, the five formally filed charges of anti-Semitism against their superiors, charging discrimination in promotions, ratings and retention. The case first went to the U. N. Appeals Board, as a result of which two won reinstatement, and then to the special board, set up last March 7.

The board's seventy-two-page report, which the U. N. is seeking to keep confidential, ran parallel to Mr. Lie's statement in its findings, and emphasized that "discrimination is a tool used to divide people and cannot co-exist with the search for peace."

"Each staff member, in taking employment under the Secretary General," the board said, "has not only the duty to avoid discrimination against any group, but also the responsibility in furthering, by his own action, the principles of mutual respect which the U. N. embodies before all the world's peoples. The person who brings discrimination into the work of the Secretariat impedes the progress of the U. N. and undoes the authority of the Secretary General."

Louis H. Rohrlick, K.C., chairman of the Central People's Relief Committee, which is sponsoring the collection, states that requests have come in for matzoh and matzoh meal for shipment to Poland, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, France, Austria, Portugal. Mr. Rohrlick states that the Polish shipment alone will require $28,800. The conference will consider ways and means of raising the funds to supply Passover needs of Jewish war victims in those countries as well as in Israel and in North Africa. The collection is under the auspices of the Congress. Louis H. Rohrlick, K.C., is chairman; S. Greenfeld, vice-chairman.

■ National Save Your Vision Week, from March 6 - 12, next, will have Reginald Lewis as chairman of the committee. Speakers on the subject are available through him.

THE SURVIVAL VALUE OF HEBREW

By Dr. Israel Goldstein, of New York, President of The World Confederation of General Zionists

The revival of the Hebrew language is part of the great miracle of our reconstruction as a people. Perhaps it is not altogether correct to say revival of the Hebrew language because actually it was never dead. It lived in the synagogue and in Rabbinic literature. It lived among those in whom the hope of Zion restored lived. It lived as a force for unity among the Jewish people even when it was reduced to the six irreducible Hebrew words of the "Shema Yishrael".

Whenever a Jew pronounced those words he was conscious of his kinship with Jews the world over. Yet the Hebrew language did not flower until about two generations ago when we began to witness the revitalization of Hebrew and its broadening as a modern tongue. It was then that Hebrew was broadened into use for the writing of prose and of poetry and for use as the vernacular of a nation reborn.

This achievement is without parallel in modern history. There have been other attempts to resuscitate ancient languages, but even where those attempts succeeded in part, they were sterile and esoteric. The miracle of the revival of Hebrew did not come without a struggle and without opposition from the assimilationists, on the one hand, and the traditionists on the other.

There are few people today who fail to realize that Hebrew is no longer the language of learning but that it is used in the streets and the workshops and in the spot fields and kindergartens of Israel. Yet an American Jewish pundit, speaking from his ivory tower, recently offered the opinion that Hebrew is not yet the language of the people and the street in Israel. I would advise him to get off his ivory tower and substitute some personal experience for research. A modern Jewish novelist, who confesses that he cannot yet read a Hebrew newspaper, offers the opinion that the Hebrew language is not flexible and not rich. The inflexibility and the poverty lie in him and not in the Hebrew language. I have no doubt that a brief tongue-lashing from a Sabra in Israel would convince him both of Hebrew's flexibility and richness. During my own recent stay in Israel I found the Hebrew language capable of expressing all nuances and ideas.

But it is not enough that we American Jews should glow vicariously with what Hebrew has come to be in Israel. For we ourselves need a deepening and a broadening of the Hebrew language and culture. We need it not only as a cultural bond between us and Israel, but we need it for ourselves. Our own spiritual and cultural survival as an American Jewish community is at stake.

We cannot take for granted that American Judaism is immune from extinction. We have seen other important Jewries become extinguished when they lacked Hebraic content. Witness the Alexandrian Jewry of nineteen centuries ago. Our reservoirs are rather low in Hebraic content and therefore in survival value. They are so low, that according to the popular standards a Jew who is able to manage to read his prayer book from the right side instead of the left side is considered by his neighbors in the synagogue as something of a Hebrew scholar. It is so low that sometimes one wonders whether we shall have to depend upon the anti-Semites in America to keep the Jewish spark alive.

We have had Sunday Schools which gave our children a smattering of ignorance and we have had week-day schools where the instruction lacked zest. We have had a condition where all types of Jewish Schools taken together only claimed twenty-five per cent of the children of our people. This process of decline, I like to think, is now at an end. It began to come to an end with the renaissance of the Hebrew language and the Hebrew nation. Out of Jewish Palestine, before it became modern Israel, there came an inflow of Hebraic content and inspiration which over the years has begun to transform the spirit and content of Jewish education in America.

Through a small band of ardent devotees of Hebraic culture who rallied to the banner of the thirty-two years of its existence, the Histadruth Ivrith has been at the heart of the Hebrew revival in this country. It has fostered Hebrew through its periodicals, publications, Hebrew-speaking circles, Hebrew-speaking camps, Hebrew arts committee and Hebrew children's theatre. It is therefore no longer a rare phenomenon to find a child who knows more Hebrew than its "cheder" oriented father.

The Hebrew tongue is the bond which holds together the Jewish people in two dimensions, time and space. It feeds our sense of kinship with the generations of the past going back to Abraham, the first Hebrew, and it feeds our sense of kinship with our generation the world over, from Buenos Aires to Tel Aviv. Hebrew is a living witness that we are one people with one history and destiny, a history cradled in land of Israel of yore and a destiny of rebirth in the State of Israel of today.

Heinz Vegetarian Baked Beans have long been "best-sellers" in all Jewish neighbourhoods. Oven-baked till they are golden-brown and tender — drenched in delightful tomato sauce — Heinz Vegetarian Baked Beans (they're pareve) are a quick-to-fix, sure-to-please dish for "milchig" or "fleischig" meals.

NO MEAT! NO FAT!
No ingredients are used in making Heinz Baked Beans which are contrary to Jewish Dietary Laws. CI-82

N.Y. Expert To Train Israelis In Hotel Field

The first course in hotel technology in the Jewish state will be instituted by Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America in its Brandeis Vocational Center, in Jerusalem, with the cooperation of the State University of New York, Institute of Applied Arts and Sciences. The State University is releasing Sam. B. Iseman, head of the Institute's hotel technology department, for five months to assist in the project.

Mr. Iseman's release was made possible by Otto Klitgord, director of the Institute of Applied Arts and Sciences, 300 Pearl Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. In granting a special leave of absence for the task, Mr. Klitgord said: "The United States is acknowledged to be in the forefront of hotel management and service, and it is gratifying to be able, through this project, to transport one more type of American know-how to a country which is pioneering the hotel field in the Middle East." The goal of Hadassah's Hotel Management Institute is "the creation of a nucleus of American-trained hotel management and service personnel, who will be ready for immediate absorption into hostelries catering to the growing tourist trade in Israel."

Mr. Iseman will begin training a group of thirty young men and women, all of whom have been vocationally tested to ascertain their potential talents in the hotel field. In addition to teaching "front office" technique, he will help set up the first hotel accounting system along American lines for food and beverage control, purchasing and housekeeping. A "laboratory hotel," comprising ten rooms and a tea-shop, which will be available to the public, will be opened in a building now being renovated in the Street of the Prophets in the Holy City. A curriculum which will combine academic studies with the practical work in the "pilot" hotel is envisaged.

Mr. Iseman, 44, has had 25 years of hotel experience. He was chief commercial faculty adviser for the Federal Public Housing Authority and set up accounting procedures for 175 cafeterias established for migratory war workers in war plant areas. He supplied emergency dormitories for several New York colleges through the government property office after the war. He managed hotels in Washington, D. C., and was associated with the Lewis Hotel School there.

Hadassah's Institute in Jerusalem is part of a $400,000 expansion program for vocational education begun in Israel last year. A fashion institute to train designers and mass production pattern-makers was opened last month. Students for the two new institutes were accepted from the Alice L. Seligsberg Vocational High School for girls, which is part of the Brandeis Vocational Center, and from other schools throughout the country. Classes in precision instrument production and a printing shop are also part of the complex.

Calls Talmud Fountain Of Youth At 100

Five generations of the Metchik family and several hundred friends gathered to celebrate the 100th birthday of its oldest member, Isaac Wolf Metchik.

Reuben Metchik, a son and a 61-year-old grandfather, kept "open house" in his apartment at 250 Riverside Drive, in New York. To be on the safe side, in case most of the 200 invited guests decided to "bring a friend", there was enough birthday cake and cold turkey on hand for 300.

Isaac Wolf Metchik was born in Brest-Litovsk near the Polish-Russian border and remembers the Crimean War. He left for London with his bride shortly after he married at 18. He lived there forty years, and still retains his British accent, particularly when he recalls such incidents as taking young Reuben to see Queen Victoria parade past in her coach during her Diamond Jubilee.

Reuben, several other children and most of the thirteen surviving grandchildren like to say "we got printers' ink in our blood from Zadie" (a Jewish word for grandfather). For Isaac Wolf Metchik was a publisher of two Jewish newspapers in London, besides founding an Orthodox Congregation and a Talmud Torah.

Asked to give his recipe for longevity, Mr. Metchik said, "The study of the Talmud and Hebrew literature is a fountain of eternal youth." He still reads religious works and the papers daily, both the New York and Jewish newspapers.

Moving to America in 1912, Mr. Metchik served as executive secretary of the Hebrew Day Nursery of New York at 262 Henry Street for thirty-six years. At 98, he said, "It's time to quit."

Although Mr. Metchik "quit" his job, he did not take the advice of doctors to "quit smoking." He explained "They gave it up. All died. I lived on." He still smokes a pack of cigarettes a day. He did take a doctor's advice recently to put a spoonful of brandy in his tea as a stimulant. "Think what I missed all these years," he said.

His great-great-grandchildren, the Rosengarten twins, Sarah Leah and Esther Pia, nearly two years old, gave him "birthday hugs." And the centenarian lit not only his birthday cake candles but the Hanukah candles. "I don't know which to light first," he said, on hearing this plan.

But the biggest surprises were the congratulatory letters from President Truman and Senator Herbert H. Lehman. From the little White House in Key West, Florida, President Truman wrote: "I am sure this notable milestone will bring you many joyous memories of your long life devoted in such large measure to the welfare of your fellow-men," adding, "best wishes that all the days beyond the sunset may be filled with peace and happiness." And Senator Lehman sent wishes for "many more years of good health and contentment."

At a recent meeting called by the Swedish Section of the World Jewish Congress in Stockholm, work was initiated on eliminating material with anti-Semitic coloring from textbooks used in Swedish schools. Leaders from both the Jewish community and from Sweden's educational circles attended. After wide discussion, a committee was elected to check textbooks and submit the findings to the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

SPORTSMANSHIP IN "CANADA UNLIMITED"

Skating moves indoors!

Gala ice revues, big-league stadium games . . . started on a January day nearly a century ago!

The Canadian Amateur Figure Skating Championships for 1950 will be held at St. Catharines, Ont., Feb. 2nd, 3rd and 4th.

It was a big day for the Halifax of 1863. The Earl of Mulgrave, Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, was to open the new indoor skating rink . . . the first in Canada's history.

At the Public Gardens, spectators thronged into the building. As the arena was declared officially open a band struck up. Onto the ice streamed 60 costumed ladies, to give an exhibition of fancy skating. Canadian indoor skating had been born. And 44 years later—in 1907—the Toronto Skating Club pioneered ice revues with their first Skating Carnival.

Sportsmanship has always meant much to Canadians. Combined with teamwork, it has made us one of the world's great nations. Together, sportsmanship and teamwork keep your opportunities for work and play in Canada . . . unlimited.

Brooklyn Store Is First To Sell Israeli Goods

The first comprehensive sale of "Made-in-Israel" goods in the U.S. took place at Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn, N.Y., department store, which imported the items produced in a score of factories and workshops in Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, and other Israel cities. Items, many especially flown from Israel, included handsome pieces for religious and household purposes: plates, jewelry boxes, book ends, wall discs, bridge ashtray sets, desk sets with blotters, pads and letter openers in bronze, brass and copper, oxidized, with a green patina, ceramics in plates and figurines; designs being of two types, modern and Yemenite.

Arthur Lourie, Israel Consul-General, hailed the sale "one of the most practical ways in which the new country can earn dollars in the U.S., by selling the best things it produces. Dollars earned in the U.S. will be used to import modern machines, parts, tools and raw materials from the U.S. which will help the new country toward greater industrialization."

Walter Rothschild, president of A & S, referred to the offering of Israeli merchandise as a two-way street. "The work now on sale", he noted, "is part of our policy of consistently offering U.S. purchasers the most desirable merchandise from the far corners of the globe. These pieces not only demonstrate the inspiration, skill and fine craftsmanship of the new country, but the taste and patience of people who have learned and worked at their trades in many parts of Europe and the Far East. It also offers the craftsmen of Israel the promise of eventually developing to the fullest their own arts and crafts."

The majority of goods, Mr. Rothschild explained, was imported by the Palestine Galleries, a non-profit organization. The Galleries, under the presidency of Charles Ress, was established by the Palestine Foundation Fund, which Mr. Ress also heads and Hadassah, Union of American Hebrew Congregations, United Synagogue of America, Zionist Organization, American Fund for Palestinian Institutions, American Economic Committee, Palestine Economic Corporation, United Jewish Appeal.

Many of the items were made at the Palbell factory, termed a typical thriving, new industrial development whose example is being repeated from one end of the country to the other and hence regarded as holding great significance for the entire country. Palbell's two-story stucco building is in an old section of Tel Aviv, near the Hatikvah quarter, a poorer section of the city.

Its founder, Hungarian sculptor Moishe Klein, came to Israel eight years ago, having "underground" himself out of his native land to Italy, where he stayed two years before going into Israel by the underground. With 78 pounds capital, he started a little workshop producing bronze, brass, and copper objects for home use and decoration, wall pieces, candelabra, etc., with a special green patina finish. New settlers moving into plain, bare, simple homes, many self-built, found his objects of special interest. As sales increased Klein, a short, squat, balding man with a big mustache, whose workmen address him as "chaver" (friend), became more and more enthusiastic.

Today, Palbell, know as Israel's largest workshop, has 75 workmen drawn from every corner of Europe. Production goes in Czech, French, Hungarian, Russian, etc., as well as Hebrew. Where words fail, demonstration fills in. From the first ceremonial objects, Palbell has developed a wide line of plates, jewelry boxes, bookends, wall discs, bridge ashtray sets, desk sets, etc.

Other workshops represented at A & S are: Eva Samuels: Miss Samuels, a German sculptress and ceramics student, joined with two partners to open a workshop in Kishon le Zion, where they now produce decorative and ceremonial ceramic figurines. Eliahu Oppenheim: Arriving from Germany in 1938, Oppenheim originally used his apartment as a workshop, then served in Israel's army. When discharged, he received government aid in establishing his own small factory where he continued his work. He now designs and creates green patina bronze objects in Tel Aviv. Joseph Szalpman: Arriving from Czechoslovakia in 1933, he introduced oxidized metal work as an Israel industry. Many workshops now are run by his former students. His Jerusalem shop specializes in green patina objects, regarded among the best handwork in Israel.

The United Synagogue of America, the national organization of Conservative synagogues, has just begun a national survey on four phases of congregational activity. Samuel Rothstein, president of the United Synagogue, said that this survey, which will be planned and directed by Dr. Emil Lehman, will include problems of synagogue attendance, Jewish education in the lower schools, adult Jewish education and youth work in Conservative congregations throughout the United States. The results of the survey will be reported next November.

MARRIAGES

LAZARE-BLOCK

The marriage of Marilyn Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Block, 3746 Grey Avenue, to Jack Russell Lazare, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emile Lazare, Summerhill Avenue, took place on Tuesday, January 10, at six o'clock, at Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue, Rabbi Wilfred Shuchat officiating, assisted by Cantor Nathan Mendelson and Rev. J. J. Fromm. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of pearl-shaded satin. Fashioned with a decollete neckline, trimmed with orange blossoms on tulle illusion, it had a fitted bodice, and full, flaring skirt, with a long circular train. Her veil fell over her head, and was caught with orange blossoms at the side; and her small cascade bouquet was of white spray orchids. Mrs. Robert O. Morgen, of Cleveland, Ohio, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a dark green taffeta ankle-length dress, with matching nylon mitts; and a clip-on hat of matching taffeta and ostrich feathers. Her flowers were a cascade bouquet of yellow roses. The other bridal attendants were: Mrs. Robert Mayer, of Chicago, Ill; Mrs. J. Harvey Wexler, Mrs. Edgar Wener, Miss Lois Kutzman, and Miss Joy Smith, all dressed alike in green faille taffeta, with toning nylon; and clip-on hats of taffeta and ostrich feathers. They carried cascade bouquets of yellow and Talisman roses. Ronald Burg was best man; and the ushers were: Herbert Burg, Irwin Leopold, Bertram T. Schwartz, Martin Taub, and Herschell Victor. Mrs. M. N. Finnberg played the organ for the ceremony. The altar was adorned with trees, and standards of yellow snapdragons at each side; and along the center aisle there were pillars of yellow snapdragons against a background of green and gold-shaded eucalyptus leaves. For the dinner in the synagogue hall, the tables were adorned with centrepieces of yellow roses, and the stage with foliage, and standards of yellow snapdragons. Receiving, Mrs. Block, mother of the bride, wore a gown of old-gold shade and brown lace, over a slip of champagne-shaded faille; and a hat of illusion tulle, with a corsage of green orchids. Mrs. Lazare, mother of the groom, wore a gown of burnt-sugar-shaded Chantilly lace, with matching hat and gloves; and a similar corsage. The bride and groom left for Nassau, the Bahamas, for their wedding trip, the bride travelling in a soft grey sharkskin suit, with green alligator shoes and bag; white flowered hat, trimmed with green velvet, and a grey lamb coat.

FISHMAN-EMMER

The marriage of Myra, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Emmer, 5421 Park Avenue, to Arthur, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Fishman, 4909 Kert Avenue, took place at Adath Israel Synagogue on January 8, at half-past five o'clock, Rabbi Charles Bender officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white net. The fitted bodice, embroidered in rhinestones and pearl beads, and designed with a high neckline and scalloped Peter Pan collar, had long sleeves, with scalloped frills on the cuffs; the dress being worn over a decollete taffeta slip, and the full skirt sweeping into a train. She had a Mary Stuart bonnet, and a finger-length veil of illusion tulle; and carried a Bible, with an orchid, and streamers. Mrs. Sidney Flanders, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Her gown was of embossed green metallic material, with a decollete shirred bodice, short-sleeved bolero jacket, and a full skirt. Her matching taffeta hat had pink and green petals at the front; and she carried pink carnations. Barbara Flanders, niece of the bride, in blue; and Gilda Rubinstein, of New York, cousin of the bride, in pink, were junior bridesmaids. CLASS IN COOKERY

three-quarters cup granulated sugar
two eggs
three-quarters cup butter and shortening combined, or either one two teaspoons baking powder
two-thirds cup chopped almonds
two teaspoons vanilla
pinch of salt
two-and one-half cups flour

Cream butter and shortening with sugar, then add eggs. Sift flour with baking powder; mix it with shortening and egg mixture. Add almonds and rest of ingredients. Divide dough in half and form into two strips. Bake in moderate oven (325 degrees), for twenty minutes. Slice while warm and place on cookie sheet, flat side down, and put back in slow oven (300 degrees) until golden brown on both sides.

Mrs. J. Gutmann,
526 St. Clements Avenue, Toronto.

CHEESE BAGELECH OR POTATO KNISHES

three cups flour
one-half teaspoon salt
one egg
three tablespoons oil

lukewarm water, about two cups, enough to make a very soft dough.

Mix above ingredients into one piece. Work with fingers for about two minutes, adding a pinch of flour, if necessary. In order to make dough easy to work with, divide into three parts, placing each part into a bowl greased with oil, and leave in frigidaire overnight. On a clean cloth dusted over with flour, roll out the dough, taking one piece at a time, and cover with an end of the cloth. Leave this aside for ten minutes.

Cheese Mixture

three pounds cottage cheese
three eggs
three tablespoons sugar
pinch of salt
one tablespoon butter
three tablespoons flour

After resting the dough, pull it over the cloth until it is as thin as tissue paper, tearing away the thick ends and spreading dough with melted butter or oil. Then spread cheese mixture or hot mashed potatoes mixed with fried onions and butter (or oil) over thin dough and roll into shapes as desired. Place in buttered baking dish, cutting not quite through with blunt knife, and bake at 350 degrees for about 25 minutes. For meat meals, use oil instead of butter for potato knishes.

Mrs. D. Greenberg,
1336 Lajoie Avenue, Outremont.

Care of the feet should be much the same as that given to the hands—they should be washed and massaged daily. Also, sensible shoes are a necessity.

The Five Greatest Jews Of The Last Fifty Years

What are the standards by which we measure greatness? To be named great one must possess spiritual power or moral idealism. Another quality by which greatness is designated is that of mental power, and certainly a great person is one who holds to the ideal of service to fellowmen.

We name Albert Einstein, as the first greatest Jew of the past half-century. Jews the world over have been thrilled by the fact that Einstein, at the age of seventy, is still pursuing new trails in the realm of science. His latest theory may be the very key to the riddle of the universe. Because the world so often debits us with our evil-doers who happen to be born Jews, it is good from time to time to think of our worthies.

We have every right to boast of the fact that Dr. Einstein is a great Jew and he is great by virtue of his identification with Jewish life. So often the Jewish great who run away from the Jewish people are in the main responsible for the double system of bookkeeping which the world maintains regarding Jews. Albert Einstein has shown an active interest in Zionism and his very first visit to the United States was in the interest of the Keren Hayesod.

It was Albert Einstein, through his theory of relativity, who paved the way for the development of atomic power. We are sure that this great humanitarian hopes that atomic power may be used for construction of a better life for all humanity and not for destruction. We hail Albert Einstein as the apostle of peace and world unity and one who is always ready to serve Israel and humanity.

As the second greatest Jew of the past fifty years we designate Sigmund Freud. He, indeed, is the Columbus of the human mind and the world is indebted to him for having revolutionized our entire conception of human behaviour. Sigmund Freud, through his studies as a physician, gave to the neurologist an instrument for exploring the unconscious and led the way to [illegible] that had hitherto shielded themselves behind impenetrable walls.

Sigmund Freud never forgot that it was before the Bnai Brith Lodge of Vienna that he was given the opportunity for the first time to expand his theories at a time when all doors were closed to him. It is significant also to observe that the last work of Sigmund Freud was "Moses And Monotheism". We may not agree with his ideas expounded in this work, but it nevertheless shows Freud's interest in explaining how the Jewish people came to the concept of monotheism and how Freud affirmed the power of religion from the truth it contains. There is no doubt that Freud hoped for an had an unbounding faith in the ultimate triumph of humanity. He was most sympathetic to the upbuilding of Jewish Palestine and was keenly interested in the growth of the Hebrew University.

As the third greatest Jew of the past fifty years we select Chaim Weizmann. In this man we have a meeting of the East and the West and a refutation of Kipling's utterance that "East is East and West is West, And never the twain shall meet." Chaim Weizmann is soaked in the traditions of East European Jewry and he loves these traditions. In this man, too, we have the best of occidental civilization and the scientific approach to life.

He is the best representative of Western scientific culture. Long before the guns ceased firing in World War I, this great Jew laid the corner-stone of the now flourishing Hebrew University in Jerusalem. His contributions to world science parallel his contributions to world Zionism. We salute Weizmann who has translated the dream of Herzl into a reality and who is today the great leader of the new State of Israel. We salute Weizmann, the statesman, the advocate of his people, the scientist, and the Jew.

The finest interpreter of the Jew to the non-Jewish world was Stephen Samuel Wise. We list Rabbi Wise as the fourth greatest Jew of the past fifty years. He is best remembered in Jewish history as the prophetic teacher and preacher. He was one of the most versatile leaders that American Jewry has produced. The great doctrine of his faith was that of liberalism and he fought the good fight for all peoples of every race and every creed in the tradition of the great Jewish prophets. He set an example for Jewish teachers in the making of dynamic synagogue life and brought a spirit of self-reverence to the Jewish people of our day. Stephen Wise was also one of the great architects of the Jewish state.

Chaim Nachman Bialik is one of the greatest Jews of the past half-century and will ever live in Jewish history as the greatest poet since Judah Halevi. It was he who fired the hearts of the Russian-Jewish masses to revolt against Russian persecution of Jews and to fight back with dignity as becomes a proud people. His poetry has all the artistry of the biblical psalms. He created anew and made Hebrew the living tongue it is today.

His love for the Jewish house of study and the synagogue found exalted expression in some of his greatest poetic utterances and through these he has given to Jews a finer appreciation for the classic religious traditions of Israel. He was the trumpet of his people and the pioneers of Palestine were inspired by his outpourings. He, too, will ever be remembered as the master interpreter of Hebrew legend and for having made the bible an open book, in particular for the youth of Israel.

Other great Jewish worthies of the past half-century who ought to be mentioned are such noble figures as Leon Blum and Rabbi Leo Baeck. These are men of great moral stature and in speaking of the Jewish great at least the names of these must be listed. However, since we are dealing with only five of the greatest, we cannot include the latter two, and speak at length about their unique contributions to Jewish and world thought.

ZIONISTS ELECT CO-PRESIDENTS; HONOUR CHIEF JUSTICE RAND OF THE SUPREME COURT OF CANADA

Samuel Schwisberg, K.C., president-elect of the Zionist Organization of Canada, moved that his sole opponent, Edward E. Gelber, of Toronto, be elected co-president, and the motion was accepted by the delegates to the convention in Montreal, and Mr. Gelber, whom Mr. Schwisberg later called "A man too good to lose," accepted the appointment.

Both men and their supporters had fought hard to win the presidency and when the final ballots were counted, Mr. Schwisberg was declared elected by a margin of six out of approximately 600 votes. He immediately mounted the rostrum and "in the interest of unity and for the good end of Zionism" made his motion.

Other officers elected were: honorary presidents, Samuel J. Zacks, Toronto, and Samuel Bronfman, Montreal; national vice-president, Hyman Grover, Montreal; vice-presidents, Harry Batshaw, K.C., Montreal; John Dower, M.B.E., Edmonton; Harold Freeman, Vancouver; David Newman, Toronto; regional chairmen, R. H. Soren, Toronto; J. M. Goldenberg, K.C., Saskatoon; Samuel Heller, Vancouver; S. Hart Green, K.C.; national treasurer, Horace R. Cohen, O.B.E., Montreal; honorary secretary, Joseph N. Frank; honorary vice-presidents, Eastern division, Joseph Fineberg, Montreal; central division, A. B. Bennett, D. Dunkelman, Samuel Kronick, Elias Pullan, Henry Rosenberg, K.C., all of Toronto; Dr. I. Goldstick, London, Ont.; Mid-western division, David Secter, R. J. Kimmel and S. Hart Green, K.C., of Winnipeg; Western division, M. M. Waterman and Samuel Rothstein, Vancouver.

Mr. Schwisberg, an active Zionist for many years, graduated from the McGill law faculty in 1927. He is a governor of the Jewish General Hospital and, for many years, he was a director of the Y.M.H.A. In 1933 he was one of the Canadian delegates to the 18th Zionist Congress in Prague. Mr. Gelber is an ordained, but non-practicing rabbi. He is also a graduate of Osgoode Hall, Toronto, and a member of the Bar of Canada and of Israel.

D. C. Abbott, Minister of Finance, in a brief address, told the closing convention: 'We in Canada have watched the development of Israel with great interest and have extended such support as we could to the emergence of that state as it assumed responsibilities of helping to maintain international peace and security, responsibilities which rest on all of us who are members of the United Nations."

Samuel J. Zacks, retiring president of the Zionist Organization, criticized "party politics" within Jewish welfare bodies and called for a reorganization of the World Zionist Organization and a single federation to include all Zionists wishing to work for Israel.

Speaking at the dinner meeting of which Michael Garber, K.C., of Montreal, was chairman, Mr. Zacks praised Canada for the part she played in the establishment of the new state of Israel.

The dinner in the Mount Royal Hotel, in Montreal, honored Mr. Justice I. C. Rand of the Supreme Court of Canada and Mr. Zacks paid him special tribute for his part as Canada's representative on the United Nations special commission on Palestine. The Z.O.C. president praised the work done by the Jewish Agency and by the Z.O.C. in aiding Israel but warned that the work must continue.

"The attainment of a Jewish State is not the final outcome of Zionism," he said. "Until every Jew who wants to go to Israel and settle there has done so, the work of Zionism remains."

He then hit at "party politics" within Jewish welfare bodies.

"I am a great admirer of Mr. Ben Gurion and his government, but his accusing note 'hands off, no meddling in our politics' is greatly resented," said Mr. Zacks. "We do resent active interference by the Jewish Agency in the autonomy of elected bodies such as the Z.O.C. We believe the time has come for a re-organization of the World Zionist Organization and the basis of its constitution, that all parties outside of Israel be abolished, that there be one federation which shall include all Zionists who wish to work for Israel, and that the people of Israel take cognizance of this."

Mr. Zacks added: "I believe that, if the party system is foisted on us, the Zionist movement will be greatly weakened. Those who are seeking the survival of Zionism cannot afford the luxury of party divisions, party quarrels and endless debates."

The American section of the Jewish Agency was elected on a party basis by the W.Z.O. at the World Zionist Congress, said Mr. Zacks. "Examine its composition and you will find party orators attaining the highest positions. Does the Jewish Agency represent the American Jew? Has it a right to be the final authority for fund-raising in America?"

In this opinion, said Mr. Zacks, there was a lack of democracy in this system. He said he believed that the executive of the Jewish Agency was part of "a machinery that should be revised."

Mr. Zacks said there "is a definite need in Israel for Canadian settlers. They are needed for their vitality and their western world skills. They would prove a needed counterweight in the population to the large numbers of broken and handicapped Jewish graduates of the concentration camps and of Hitler's shattering terror."

Speaking on Israel's spiritual contribution to the world were Mr. Justice I. C. Rand of Canada's Supreme Court, and Hon. Aubrey E. Eban, permanent Israel delegate to the United Nations.

Mr. Rand said that in a world which uses money as a barometer of success, "Israel represents a rebirth of the appreciation of cultural values. Mr. Rand was guest of honor as the Canadian member on the United Nations committee which advised partition of Palestine into Jewish and Arab states. He was presented with an illuminated plaque.

Making a plea for racial tolerance, Mr. Rand said: "The social reconciliation of ethnic and cultural diversity calls for the creation of our own 'weather of the soul.'"

He added that the accomplishment of this aim called for the "education of both child and adult." Speaking specifically of Israel and Canada, Mr. Rand said that on his visit to Palestine he was impressed by the vigor of the cultural life there — in drama, art, literature and music. "In Canada," he added, "we are experiencing a like Renaissance."

And in a plea to both countries he said: "Let us give more devotion to the quest of beauty and art and to the contemplation in humility of the embodiments of human greatness."

Mr. Eban warned that "eternal vigilance" was the price of Israel's survival. Speaking on the contentious problem of Jerusalem — the city Israel has just taken over against the wishes of the U.N. — Mr. Eban said:

"No, power exists which can separate Jerusalem from Israel. The two are living organisms which have grown together, firm and indissoluble."

He said the reason that Israel took over the Holy City in defiance of world opinion was: "Unless Jerusalem is politically peaceful it cannot be religiously serene." Mr. Eban promised that the rights of the three great religions which consider Jerusalem their spiritual home would not be interfered with. He also said that in making these decisions which had brought U.N. censure to the new state, he had consulted "Canada's great Minister of External Affairs."

He promised that Israel would continue to co-operate with Canada in the U.N.

Too much "talk" among Jewish groups is dividing the Zionist movement, David A. Croll, K.C., M.P., told the Zionist Organization convention. "Dividers are doing a disservice to Israel," said Mr. Croll. "We cannot do away with political parties in Zionism so long as there are political parties in Israel — or in Canada. You can't make a conservative out of me," said Mr. Croll. "Similarly you can't eliminate political parties in the Zionist cause.... This talk of divided loyalties is nonsense."

Meyer W. Weisgal, executive chairman of the Weizmann Institute of Science in Israel, attacked "the confusion, distortion, inertia and inability to free ourselves from a mode of thinking and action which has governed our Zionist life and held us in its grip for the past decade. A corrosive influence has been gnawing at the vitals of our Zionism for the past decade," said Mr. Weisgal. "And the birth of the state did not stop it... I would call it 'catastrophic Zionism'."

Mr. Weisgal called for a combination of the content and merit of "classical Zionism" with the needs of Israel. "We must fire people's imagination about the kind of state and society we want to build. To do this we must achieve a new alignment of forces. The whole Jewish people must become involved. It must be made aware that its own destiny is tied up with the destiny of the state."

Judge Louis E. Levinthal, former president of the Zionist Organization of America, urged Americans and Canadians to invest in Israel.

"Israel has seen a miraculous transformation in the last 25 years," he said. "I am convinced that there are many attractive opportunities there for direct private investment, in addition to those offered by the Palestine Economic Corporation of America." He cited as fields for investment hotels, textiles, non-ferrous foundries, kitchenware, a cardboard plant, plywood factories, pipe-fitting, furniture and others.

"Any American who wants a reasonable return with security of principal, and who does not expect to get rich quick through unlimited economic privileges, will find Israel an ideal place for his capital," said Judge Levinthal.

Gottlieb Hammer, New York executive director of the American Section, Jewish Agency, told delegates that in 1950 the United Israel Appeal Agencies need some $210,000,000, which will be divided as follows:

Initial care and absorption of immigrants would take $58,000,000; agricultural colonization, $45,000,000; acquisition of land, $5,000,000; afforestation, $5,000,000; miscellaneous activities, $12,000,000; development of Jerusalem, $6,000,000; and debt services and amortization, $41,000,000.

Delegates also heard Elias M. Epstein, Jerusalem director, discuss the Jewish National Fund in Israel, and heard a report by Rabbi Jesse Schwartz, national executive director of the Z.O.C., detailing work done by various sections. The report of the Jewish National Fund of Canada was also submitted.

ISRAEL ORCHESTRA

Partosz, Marc Lavry, and Manuel Mahler-Kalkstein, will be represented in the orchestra's American programs. Both conductors said that composition in Israel was now at a point corresponding to that of American music early in this century, with composers looking to local folk music as the basis of a national musical idiom.

The orchestra is expected to give four or five concerts in New York. According to Mr. Hurok, there is a large demand for its appearances elsewhere, with local sponsors asking for two or more concerts in each of their cities. At present, it is being conducted in Israel by Charles Bruck, a young conductor of French origin; Serge Koussevitsky will also appear with it this season.

MEMORIAL

architecture and design, Philip C. Johnson, issued a statement describing Mr. Goodman's memorial as "probably one of the best monuments of this kind to have been developed in this country in recent years."

The proposal to erect the memorial has been beset with controversies since its inception. Jo Davidson, the sculptor, was invited first to submit designs for a memorial. This he did, but, according to Frank L. Weil, who is Mr. Davidson's attorney, they were rejected by the committee. Mr. Weil asserted that Mr. Davidson had been paid only one-third the sum agreed on for his preliminary work.

WOMEN URGE

Henry Morgenthau, Jr. asked continued aid to the United Jewish Appeal, of which he is chairman. Rabbi E. Samuel, president of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York, pleaded for "home front" support.

Citations were presented to nine guests designated by the women's federation as "women of achievement." They were Miss Elizabeth Arden, Mrs. August Belmont, Miss Lillian Hellman, Mrs. Ogden Reid, Miss Dorothy Shaver, Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, Mrs. Edith P. Weky, Miss Marian Young, known on the radio as Martha Deane, and Mrs. Rose Baran.

The audience rose to applaud Mrs. Baran as the spry woman of 97 walked up to Mrs. Isaac Gilman, president of the federation, for her award. She began providing free lunches to crippled school children thirty-nine years ago through the New York Philanthropic League of the United Order of Two Sisters, which inspired the Government's free lunch program. The organization also rehabilitates crippled boys and girls.

Henry Morgenthau jr., general chairman of the United Jewish Appeal for 1950, urged that American Jewish philanthropies postpone for a year some of their proposed expansion programs to give increased aid to suffering Jewish immigrants in Israel, where 90,000 persons still live in tents.

Mr. Morgenthau asked that all communities which have United Jewish Appeals continue to give three-fourths of the amounts raised to his organization, as they have in the recent past, rather than the one-fourth suggested by some communities this year. U. J. A.'s needs for 1950 are set at $273,000,000.

Charging that the majority of the Jews in the United States are still "ghettoized" socially, he said the way they had responded to the needs of Israel had done much to raise them in the esteem of other Americans, but if they failed Israel now they would slip back to the position of two years ago. He cited as an example of "ghettoism" the city of Minneapolis, where, he said, no Jew was a member of any important civic committee, and if any wanted to join the American Automobile Club, he had to go St. Paul.

Ralph E. Samuels, president of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, replied to Mr. Morgenthau by saying that American bounty was sufficient to care for both its domestic and its foreign responsibilities.
